

HIGH WATER MARK ON FIRST STREET REALTY

Corner of First and Rice
Sold Yesterday at $350 per Front Foot--Jumped $200 in 12 Months.

There have been few deals in the history of the city that have shown more remarkable advances than this one closed yesterday. Not a year ago Chas. McLeod, a Red Deer farmer, purchased the property in question at $150 a foot. The frontage is situated on First street, but the lots, by the survey, face on Rice, giving a 75-foot street frontage of 70 feet and a depth on Rice street of 78 feet. Mr. McLeod, therefore, paid $13,500 for the property. He has since refused several tempting offers for his purchase, but until yesterday none of them came up to his idea of what the property should bring. He now closes out at $31,500, realizing $18,000 profit.

By the deal negotiated yesterday W. R. McGeorge acquires 60 feet on the corner, and Rolf & Kenwood get the 30 feet to the south.

Mr. McGeorge calculates to build a handsome bank building on his property, covering the entire lot, and Rolf & Kenwood will build an office building for their own use on their 30 feet. The Chinese laundry and the old Journal office, which are the only buildings now on the lots, are there on a ground lease and will have to be moved off.

Plans will be prepared during the winter and an early start made with the buildings in the spring.

The highest price ever paid for First street realty was reached yesterday in a deal by which W. R. McGeorge, of Oklahoma, and Rolf & Kenwood, of Edmonton, bought from Chas. McLeod, of Red Deer, the two lots, No. 22 and 23, R. L. 6, at the corner of First and Rice. David N. Dunn, the First street real estate man, negotiated the deal.

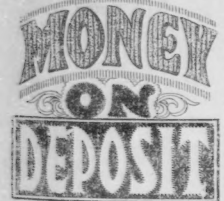

The purchasing parties intend to commence early in the spring with the erection of handsome buildings on their purchases.

AGED PRISONER TAKES STAND IN HIS OWN DEFENCE

Joshua Gilbert Tells the Story of the Shooting of Barrett Henderson.

Beina, Nov. 15.—Joshua Gilbert, charged with the murder of Barrett Henderson, formerly of White River, P.E.I., occupied the stand for the greater part of the afternoon and will appear in court again tomorrow. He is not making out just the best case for himself and the general opinion is that Gilbert would have been better off of the box. "He is hanging himself," remarked a lawyer at the close of the sitting. Military officers in the persons of Inspector Heffernan and Inspector Knight were giving expert evidence today and both swore that to inflict the wound which caused the death of Henderson, Gilbert must have been within ten feet, and have fired the shot from a level with the head of the deceased. With his seventy years, the aged prisoner appeared in the dock to open the case for the defence. To his lawyer, Norman Mackenzie, the prisoner told a straight story of accident, although he omitted to mention how the gun came to be loaded with slugs instead of shot. He told how he was walking out of the stable when he felt the gun in going off shot Henderson. The latter misconstrued the motive of Gilbert, started to run and the witness picked up the gun, which had been knocked out of his hand by the impact of the sudden discharge and chased after his man. He was dazed through the falling of a rupture, caused when he stumbled and it was not until he saw the two men passing along the roadway that he realized that he still held the gun as he ran. He then "came to" and dropped the gun. The weapon has not yet been found and Gilbert denied any knowledge of where it is now. Mr. Allen undertook the cross-examination for the crown. One story he secured from the prisoner was that he picked Henderson up after the shooting and then returned for the gun. At another point of the evidence he stuck to the old story that Henderson got up himself and started to run. The defence is also to call medical evidence.

WAS ALL A HOAX STORY OF A NEW GOLD FIND

Battleford People Return Sadder and Wiser From the Supposed Gold Field

(Bulletin Special)
North Battleford, Nov. 15.—The excitement caused by the alleged discovery of gold at Birling has subsided, it having been proved by experienced miners who have examined the tract that the precious metal is conspicuous by its absence and those who left this vicinity have returned sadder and wiser men.

The new $6,000 rink in course of erection is nearing completion and is expected to be ready for use shortly. A hockey club will be formed as there is excellent material here to work from and a fast team is likely to be the result.

A large force of men are at work excavating the crossings for the new sidewalk, the material for which has at last arrived. It will be pushed to completion this fall.

Kelly Bros., of Kenora, Ont., have the contract for the new bridge across the Saskatchewan between the two towns, which will be completed as soon as possible and will fill a long felt want.

The Imperial bank propose erecting an imposing brick structure next spring, plans and specifications for which are being prepared at their central office.

The Brunswick hotel changed last Monday, W. Wilson having sold out to Messrs. Graves & Thompson, the well known hotel men.

The town council has ordered a chemical fire engine of the latest type to be delivered immediately, which will place the fire department on a footing equal in efficiency with that of any western town.

PARK SUPERINTENDENT IN TROUBLE

Winnipeg, Nov. 14.—The parks board meeting yesterday was the scene of an alleged discourse which, if true, seriously impugns the character and conduct of Superintendent England and his henchman, Danton. The former was accused of appropriating to his own use public property and the services of men and horses, while the main charge against the latter was that of drunkenness.

LUNATIC WOUNDED

Brandon, Nov. 14.—The man, Francis Shaw, picked up just outside the city Tuesday afternoon, suffering from a pistol shot wound in the abdomen, was an inmate of the Brandon asylum who had wandered from the building some time during the morning. While some cartridges have been found in his pockets no pistol has been found. If the wound was self-inflicted there is no explanation as to how he secured the weapon. Shaw is in a serious condition. He recovered consciousness this afternoon but refuses to make any explanation.

NARROW ESCAPE FOR PASSENGER TRAIN

Freight Train Derailed in Southern B. C. by a Mud Slide

(Bulletin Special)

Nelson, B.C. Nov. 16.—All traffic is shut off between Nelson and Spokane today owing to the derailment of a freight train last night within half a mile of Trout Junction, five and a half miles east of Nelson. The freight ran into a mud slide on a heavy grade. A passenger train had a narrow escape, having passed the spot only a few minutes before the slide came down. Heavy rains were the cause.

ONTARIO HOCKEY.

Toronto, Nov. 4.—The Ontario Hockey association executive tonight debarred the Barrie hockey club and President Jameson and Manager McLaren from their share in the litigation against the O. H. A. last season. Four players were professionalized for taking part in the Haliburton-New Liskard game last winter.

SHUT OUT THE COMPANY

Port Arthur, Nov. 15.—Some little excitement has been caused by the action of the Ontario government in cancelling a concession held by the Niagara Power Co. The town and company had been in negotiation looking to the ultimate supplying of the town with ten thousand horse power at $15 per horse power per year. Conjecture is rife as to the reason for this action at this particular moment, and the Chronicle thinks it looks as if an attempt is being made to create a power monopoly in the district, giving control of the power situation to the Kaministiquia Power Co.

FOUND GUILTY BY WINNIPEG JURY

An Italian Found Guilty of the Murder of a Fellow Countryman

(Bulletin Special)

Winnipeg, Nov. 15.—The Italian murder trial was brought to a close at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when the jury filed slowly into the court room and announced that they had found Salvatore Marci guilty of the murder of his fellow countryman, John Romanelli. Another murder trial was in progress when the verdict was rendered, but all proceedings stopped while Marci stood up in the dock to hear his fate. He appeared to take the result as he had taken the proceedings of the whole trial, it a most social manner.

PROBABLY FELL FROM TRAIN

Fort William, Nov. 15.—The remains of an unknown man were found by a party of section men on Tuesday by a steel bridge on the C. P. R. track between Sunshine and Pimmar. The man's face was terribly disfigured and his body mutilated in a fearful manner. Nothing could be found upon his person to indicate his identity, but as a passenger conductor's check was found in his hat, it is thought that he had leaped out on the steps of a passenger coach and that his head had come in contact with one of the beams of the steel bridge a few yards from where his body was found. The body was clad in a suit of dark rough material and from appearances his age is thought to be about 45.

RATES ARE CUT ON AMERICAN ROADS

Hill Inaugurates Movement to Lessen the Cost of Transportation in Northern States.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 15.—In accordance with the statement of J. J. Hill, at Chicago the other day, to the effect that the time was now at hand for the western roads to cut freight rates, the Great Northern has issued circulars giving a notice of a cut of about 20 per cent. With the Great Northern road making such a reduction there is no doubt but that the other western and northwestern lines will soon follow suit. The business during the last few years has increased to such an extent that the cost of shipping can now be cut profitably to lower rates than now prevail. The Great Northern rates will take effect Thursday and will be good to all parts of Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota. In some cases the new rate is 25 per cent. lower than formerly.

COCKBURN EXPLAINS

(Bulletin Special)
Toronto, Nov. 15.—Through his solicitor, President Cockburn of the Ontario Bank issued a statement regarding shares that he was said to have sold to the bank at a profit. He says he bought the shares and paid for them with his own money raised on notes. Cockburn held these shares not more than two years, when feeling he had spread out his funds too much, he told McGill he wished to sell them. McGill informed him there was plenty of demand for the stock and he would dispose of it for Cockburn. McGill then got Cockburn to sign a blank transfer in a book; which Cockburn believed at the time to be the regular transfer book; and subsequently had received the proceeds of the sale never knowing until the land examination on Nov. 12th that his blank transfer had been filled up as to the bank's guarantee funds. Not until then did he learn that the book was not the ordinary transfer book but a special one reserved for secret transfers of the existence of which Cockburn was ignorant.

STEAMERS COLLIDE.

Sarnia, Nov. 16.—The Canadian steel steamer Seguin and the Steel Trust company's tow barge, Sir Isaac Lothian Bell, came together, bow on, in the St. Clair rapids, on the Canadian side of the river, about 10:30 last night. The Bell sank in two minutes in twenty feet of water, with a huge hole in her bow. The night was perfectly clear. The crew were in no danger as the Bell was light. The Seguin is at the Sarnia dock, resting on the bottom with her bow stove in above the water line, and another big hole below the water line. Her hold is full and she lies in about eighteen feet of water. The Bell was in tow of the John D. Rockefeller, and proper signals were given. The Seguin with a load of lumber was on the American side. She passed the Rockefeller and then seemed to swerve, striking the Bell bow on. There is a swift current at this point. This is the second time the Seguin has sunk, she having run the City of New York down in Lake Erie.

INDIANS TO WORK.

RAYMOND, Alta., Nov. 9.—The Dominion government has undertaken a difficult task. The Indian department has decided that the Indian man who is first experienced will be made upon the ground in the vicinity of Raymond where the Indians as well as every other kind of help are very much in demand by the best factory.

The department proposes to take the Indians to the work which they are able to do when the call is made for them by the best growers, and the Indians who respond to that call will be given great consideration by the Indian department and reservation officials. It is proposed to give the Indians a regular pay day at the end of the month or at the conclusion of the work they have in hand, and a representative from the reservation will be present to assist in the settlement, pay the Indians bills and take care of the interest that may be some permanent benefit from his earnings instead of wasting what he has worked for so arduously.

There are on the reservation approximately 120 Indians and there are now employed in the fields about Raymond nearly 100 of them. Already there is growing unrest and they are preparing for an exodus so as to be on the reservation on Nov. 8, which is treaty day, to get their money. They have been already informed that treaty day has been postponed to Dec. 7, or some other day near that time or at any date after the best season closes. The policy of the department is to teach the Indians to be self-sustaining to take care of what they earn, and purchase with their earnings what will go to assist in their permanent prosperity.

UNDERWEAR.

This Charge is Hurdled at the Slater Shoe by a Dealer.

"You are responsible and you alone, for the importation of American Shoes into Canada." Mr. Slater was surprised when this charge was hurled at him by an indignant shoe man. He had opposed the application of the other Canadian Shoe Manufacturers for an increase in the shoe tariff, and stoutly and ably opposed it, his competitors admitted. But his opposition, he maintained, did not favor the foreign shoe.

This is the way the charge against the Slater Shoe Company was argued. "You give exclusive agencies for the Slater Shoe. Only one man in a town or city can have this agency. What are the other dealers in the town to do? Sit down and allow the Slater Shoe to get all the trade of people who want fine shoes! Not much, sir! We know that the only shoe that can stand with your shoe in style and workmanlike, is the American Shoe! And they have to have it. The buyer pays the duty too."

LOOKING ON THE MAGNATES.

(Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 15.)—Deputy Sheriff John Hancock county and Deputy Sheriff Ambrose of this county resumed search early today for the indicted Standard Oil officials. They visited in turn the residences and offices of H. M. Robertson, M. G. Vitis and J. P. McIntosh. They failed to find the men wanted. Deputy Sheriff John Hancock declared that the failure to obtain service on the officials had resulted from a breach of confidence by a newspaper correspondent which had given the men indicated ample time to get out of the court's jurisdiction.

Winnipeg, Man. Nov. 15.—While walking on the street with Thomas Sheppard, John Henry Stephenson Jones of 786 Alexander ave. fell in a fit from which he never recovered, dying as he was being taken to the general hospital. The victim was 59 years of age and came to Winnipeg from Birmingham, England.

THE MARKETS

OF THE WORLD

(Reported by Canadian Grain and Stock Co., Gariepy Block, Edmonton)

Bulletin Special.
Chicago, Nov. 15.—Hamburg cables confirm the report of damage to the wheat crop by frost.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—Wheat.—The wide fluctuations in prices of wheat show positively that interest is broadening. Heavy eastern selling. We expect some good trading and broader markets. The foreign reports do not at the moment show that market is disposed to follow ours. For the time being, would not hesitate to buy on dips and take profits on bulges.

St. Louis, Nov. 15.—"Drought conditions which have been prevalent in most of the principal wheat districts, checking the growth to some extent, have relieved by recent snows in the West which have extended through Missouri and Illinois. The more eastern localities have experienced good rains."

Chicago, Nov. 15.—Long wheat, still seems to be on tap. There is a little changing going on, but aside from this the market is dull for the moment.

STOCK NOTES

New York, N. Y., Nov. 15.—St. Paul has advanced steadily and the stock in still selling below its real value. Still a good bet back is not unlikely, when it will be a good time to make purchases or on the bulges from this level sell for a turn.

New York, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Stocks are acting well. Outside interest in the market is increasing and a decided better feeling prevails. The setback of a point or two would afford an excellent opportunity to buy good stocks with every prospect of handsome profits feeling of confidence so far as the money market is concerned prevails, especially in London where now the possibilities of a reduction of Bank of England are being discussed. Consequently investment buying is increasing in international issues, such as Penna and the Hill stocks. Banks have cut down the losses incurred in their sub-treasury operations.

THE RETIRING MAYOR.

Mayor May announced yesterday that he would not again be a candidate for the mayoralty. His decision terminates, temporarily at least, a career of three years in municipal life which has been distinguished by more than usual activity. First as councillor for the town, and later as alderman for the city, the retiring mayor was distinctively a worker and gave to the affairs of the growing city the steady attention and continuous effort of an energetic business man. Edmonton has been blessed, probably above the average with councillors and aldermen who devoted their attention to civic affairs even to the neglect of their personal private interests, but never one who gave more freely and cheerfully of his time and effort than Mr. May. His career as a member of the council was approved last year by his choice as mayor, and the activity which characterized him in the lesser sphere has marked also his career in the more important office. With the course of the board of commissioners of which he formed a member, and of the council, over which he presided, the Bulletin has not always found itself able to agree, and when unable to do so has endeavored to state its views courteously but plainly. But the disinterested activity of the mayor it has never doubted nor called into question, and this word of appreciation is tendered the more freely that the course of the mayor has not always met with our approval. Edmonton is large enough, and our municipal problems large enough and numerous enough that criticism should be welcomed rather than resented by the city government, so long as the criticism be fair, sincere, and courteous. On the other hand, the duties imposed on the chief executive by our municipal system are very large, they demand a share of time and attention which can ill be spared by a man of large business interests, and for which the financial allowance is no adequate recompense. The city must therefore remain indebted to a mayor who honestly endeavors to fulfil his duties, and this indebtedness it would be churlish to refrain from acknowledging.

ASSAILING THE PREFERENTIAL TARIFF.

"Industrial Canada," commenting on the tariff, says that if the British preferential tariff were as high as the present general tariff and the general tariff were increased 33 1/3 per cent, the majority of the Canadian manufacturers would probably be satisfied. They certainly ought to be, but that they would be we are by no means confident, even on the assurance of their official organ. The suggestion that they might still ask for more may have been intended as a delicate pleasantry, but the joke savors altogether too much of the seriously probable. There is certainly nothing either in the history or the avowed purpose of the manufacturers to corroborate the suggestion that their hunger for tariff favors would be finally appeased even by the hold-up outlined by "Industrial Canada." The history of the manufacturers' tariff demands is that the more an appetite for private gain at public expense be encouraged, the more capacious that appetite becomes and that a further advance of public favors so far from satisfying the importunate only emboldens their insistence in demanding more. The avowed purpose of the Canadian manufacturers is to drive every competitor from the Canadian market, yet "Industrial Canada" argues that the increase in the preferential tariff is requested only to counteract the cheaper methods of production in Great Britain and place the Canadian manufacturer on an equal basis with his British competitor in the Canadian market. In the light of their general policy it is not to be supposed that the owners of "Industrial Canada" would be satisfied with the half-way measure suggested by their organ, and its proposal may safely be taken only as a request to insert the thin end of a wedge designed to force British goods out of the Canadian market.

Continuing, "Industrial Canada" cites the fact that we buy more goods from the United States than from Great Britain, and argues that this condition would not continue under the tariff elevation it proposes. This phase of "Industrial Canada's" case resolves simply into the stock argument for the exclusion of all "foreign" goods, an argument by no means new, and which gains nothing in weight by being muddled in an attitude of pretended regret that our imports from the United States exceed those from Great Britain. The regret of "Industrial Canada" is not that we buy more goods in the United States than in Great Britain, but that we buy any manufactured articles in either the United States or Great Britain, and the proof is that it demands a tariff increase against both countries alike, and an increase in exactly the same proportion against British goods as against those manufactured in the United States. The increase being proportionately the same the added cost to the British maker to lay down his goods in Canada would be exactly the same in comparison as the added cost of American goods laid down in Canada.

But the cost of the goods to the Canadian consumer would not be the same. Whether they came from Britain or from the United States, the cost of the goods would be 33 1/3 per cent higher than at the present time, and the result of this in turn would be that for every dollar's worth of American goods excluded there would be also excluded a dollar's worth of British goods, while the Canadian manufacturer would be given the opportunity of adding another 33 1/3 per cent to the cost of his products without increasing the danger of losing the market to either British or American competitors. The cause of "Industrial Canada" thus resolves itself into the old purpose of enabling the Canadian manufacturer to tighten the screws on the Canadian consumer and the cause is lowered but not disguised by the fact that the blow is delivered at the British manufacturer as well as at the manufacturer of the United States.

This is the significant feature of "Industrial Canada's" pronouncement, and it is the more significant that parliament has been called to meet on Thursday next for the express purpose of revising the tariff. That the manufacturers would wage war on the present general tariff was to be expected, but how these ardent professors of patriotism would treat the favors Canada has extended to the manufacturer of the Motherland may have been a matter of some doubt. Such doubts, however, are set at rest by the pronouncement of the manufacturers' official organ that their attitude is one of uncompromising hostility, that they stand for the practical abolition of the British preference, and for the creation of tariff barriers which would exclude British goods in exactly the same proportion as goods manufactured in foreign countries. Presumably this is the program which the manufacturers wish Parliament to understand them as endorsing.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Calgary Albertan: There is one Conservative who objects to the election methods of the Conservative candidate in Gleichen, and that person is Mr. Robertson, leader of the opposition. The platform of the Conservatives is to elect Mr. Walsh who, when elected will be leader of the opposition. Mr. Robertson, the leader of the opposition, comes from Nanton. The home paper takes up his case and referring to the candidature of Mr. Walsh in Gleichen, says: "The News can't help but resent the attitude of the Conservative journals throughout the province toward the leader of his majesty's loyal opposition, the member from High River riding and a resident of Nanton. Why all this talk about wanting a strong leader of the opposition in the legislature? It is true that Mr. Robertson had no previous legislative experience when he was called to the leadership of the minority; but what has been Mr. Walsh's previous legislative experience? Wherein is Mr. Walsh superior to Mr. Robertson? Or is the opposition trying to bunco the electors of Gleichen? If the opposition can't appreciate what the electors of this riding have done for them, the best thing next time will be to send a Liberal."

Directly West of Bank of Commerce

WESTERN NEWS.

Saskatoon self-confessedly is in need of more light. Says the Saskatoon Phoenix: It is reminiscent of the middle ages to see so many citizens arming themselves with lanterns before venturing out into the streets these dark nights. It is a wise precaution, too, for there are many treacherous spots where the unwary may come to grief. It would almost be necessary in the interest of public safety to have a gang of medieval link boys to light one to and fro across the track before the moon rises. People actually lose themselves some nights on that small expanse of black waste. The language one hears of times amidst the murkiness is distinctly forcible.

The Canadian Pacific Railway Company are pushing operations east of Saskatoon, and taking all necessary steps to be in an advanced position for the lines west early in 1907. The first decision to put in a pile bridge at Saskatoon has been abandoned, and work will shortly be started upon a concrete, steel structure. The contracts will be let for the substructure within the next ten days and the work pushed all through the winter. The extra cost of heating the concrete and putting frost protection on the piers will be less than the putting in of a pile bridge. The new permanent structure, it is confidently stated, will be ready for use by May 1, 1907.

At Seattle, Wash., J. A. Bunce, for four years a deputy under Sheriff Cuddehe, and until recently the partner of L. A. Nelson, late candidate for sheriff on the Democratic ticket, in a private detective agency, was arrested yesterday upon a complaint sworn to by W. M. Rice, special agent of the treasury department, charged with smuggling.

It is the most sensational case with which the customs officials of the state have had to deal in years, not only because of the prominence of the man involved, but because of the bold methods employed by him in carrying on his alleged illicit business. Bunce is said to be worth $75,000.

At the time of his arrest Bunce was supposedly working in the interest of the United States government to unearth a band of smugglers which he said he had reason to believe were operating in and around Lynden, on the British Columbia line; but it has developed, from such investigation as has been made by the federal officers, ing the contraband goods over the line.

It is estimated that to remove all the commercial garbage in the city of Winnipeg the scavenging department would spend about $70,000 more per year than is the case at present. The annual garbage removal bill is now about $48,000, so that to remove garbage of all classes it would cost nearly $120,000 per annum.

James Mitchell, a pioneer of the west, and a highly esteemed resident of Victoria, died last week at his home. Born near Port Stanley, Elgin county, Ontario, 80 years ago, he, on the conclusion of his early business training, identified himself with the development of Western Canada, spending a considerable time in Manitoba, where he was interested in grain enterprises and traded on the Great Lakes. In 1888 Mr. Mitchell moved to Victoria and for years represented the E. B. Eddy Company there.

W. C. Wells, M.P.P. for Columbia, visited Victoria recently, and spoke to the interviewers there with enthusiasm of the boom on iron in the Kootenay district. Among other things, the settlers are paying great attention to fruit growing and are meeting with most gratifying success.

MEN'S WINTER STYLES

Are Shown in the Book Just Published in Montreal.

"Manners and Modes for Men" is the title of the book published by the Semi-Ready Company in Montreal. Copies may be had free from the Manager of the Semi-Ready Wardrobe here.

In the book, the President of the Semi-Ready Company, who is a recognized authority on men's dress, gives a series of effective pictures showing the distinctive character of dress for various pursuits and purposes. While it is impossible to picture that touch of warmth and brightness in the new coats, the Semi-Ready styles cling closely to the subdued and unobtrusive finer cloths, which assure distinctive elegance and forbid that too bold effect which is displeasing.

The forecast made some months ago by the author of this book, has turned out correct in the tone, the shape and the color most desired by gentlemen.

The new sack coat for the Fall and Winter of 1906, will have neither centre or side vents. This has given place to this close waist and flowing hip and the easy fitting sack. Both styles are shown.

The newest winter overcoat is called the French Chestnut. It is a modification of the fashions first shown.

BRITISH IMMIGRATION

London, Eng., Nov. 15.—After a consultation with Lord Strathcona, and in accordance with the instructions of Hon. Frank Oliver, Bruce Walker has made several changes in the immigration staff. Walker goes to Glasgow from Dublin, which office is temporarily closed. Offices will be opened in Aberdeen, Londonberry and York. The Aberdeen agent's territory is to be "north of the line drawn across Scotland through Perth." Murray, the agent at Cardiff, goes to Exeter. Mr. Walker recommends the purchase of a motor omnibus to be used in carrying products of Canada into the mid and countries and the north of England, also three light motor cars for use in the Welsh and Scotch hills. This vigorous policy is awakening local booking agents and efforts regarding British emigrants are to be redoubled.

MARVELLOUS CURE OF BURNS
Zam-Buk has been called "the worker's friend" because it brings such relief and healing to workers who suffer from cuts, burns, bruises or any skin injury or disease. Mr. Alf J. Clark, of Cavendish street, London, (Ont.), tells how Zam-Buk cured him of severe burns. He says:—"I got my hands very severely burned with lime. The burns were so deep that as I pined my shovel the blood actually ran down the hands. The agony I suffered would well imagine I tried several different kinds of salves but the burns were too severe for these preparations to heal. I obtained a supply of Zam-Buk and the very first application gave me ease. This pleased me, you may guess, but as I applied the balm each day I was more and more pleased with the effect. The pain was relieved completely."

"I had often heard of Zam-Buk, but thought before I tried it that it was similar to the ordinary salves you see advertised. In a very short time Zam-Buk healed my burns completely, and my hands actually felt better—the muscles more firm and the skin in better condition than before I was burned."

Not only for burns, but for cuts, bruises, sprains, etc., Zam-Buk is the best and surest cure. It also cures eczema, ulcers, abscesses, ringworm, boils, impetigo, poisoned wounds, chapped or cracked hands, cold sores, chilblains, bad leg, piles, etc. All druggists sell at 50c a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, on receipt of price. 6 boxes for $2.50.

ELEVATOR BRUNED

Fort William, Ont., Nov. 11.—After enjoying immunity from fire for nearly a year, Fort William was visited by a destructive blaze early this morning, which totally destroyed Multhead & Black's elevator, situated on Hardy street. The fire broke out in the cleaning room, while the men were engaged in eating their midnight lunch in another part of the building. The machinery is all run by electricity and there was no fire of any kind in the building. So just how the blaze started is a mystery. Some blame it on defective electric wires; or as the building is close to the C.P.R. tracks and yard, it may have been caused by a spark from the engine. When the men discovered the fire it had made good headway and in a short time, and before the fire department could render any assistance the entire building was in flames and all efforts to save it were fruitless. The brigade, however, saving the adjoining buildings where a considerable quantity of wheat, flour and feed, etc., was stored. A new lot barley plant had only been installed last week and it is ruined with the rest of the machinery. The total loss will go over $20,000 with $10,000 insurance. Both members of the firm state they will rebuild at once.

THE NEWFOUNDLAND CASE

Onrmeal, Nov. 15.—An account has been received here of Premier Bond's first attempt to enforce the Bait Act, which forbids the employment of Newfoundland fishermen on the Gloucester fleet of American fishing boats. Yesterday a Newfoundland solicitor and Police Inspector O'Reilly boarded the American herring schooner Ralph Hall at the Bay of Islands, and attempted to arrest some local fishermen but the captain advised them not to interfere with the men in his employ, and the officials retired. They consulted a local magistrate who telegraphed the government for instructions to summon the fishermen under the Bait Act for restraining the government.

St. John's, Nfld., Nov. 15.—The situation is acute. The fishermen employed by the American boats say they will fight rather than be taken off the boats by the order of the Newfoundland government insisting on the enforcement of the Colonial Bait Act.

A Duel to the Death

By Alexander Dumont

(Edmonton Free Press)

Louis De Clermont, Count Bussy d'Amboise, returned in haste to the Louvre. As accredited ambassador from the king's brother, the Duc d'Anjou, he brought with him that prince's hard-won submission—a submission which had taxed to the utmost Catherine de Medici's tact and diplomacy to win.

Bussy presented himself to the king, accompanied by any of the three young noblemen, Livarot, Riberauc and Antraquet, who were his closest friends and adherents.

Henry III received him coldly in the great throne room where he was surrounded by his courtiers, among them his four favorites—Quelus, Maugiron, Schomberg and the Duc d'Epéron. Between these latter and Bussy's three friends there existed an enmity of long standing and when, after a brief and frigid audience, Henri III dismissed the court, Bussy found himself surrounded by the king's favorites, who had gathered with the evident intention of provoking that duel to the death which had long been the king's dearest wish, and whereby he hoped to rid France of the staunchest supporters of his brother.

Bussy, secure in the renown which his many hard fought and victorious duels had won him, feigned ignorance of the threatening attitude of the conspirators.

At last d'Epéron exclaimed coarsely—

"See, gentlemen, how countrified our elegant Bussy has become during his sojourn in the provinces with Monsieur d'Anjou."

"That reflection occurred to me as well, gentlemen," retorted Bussy with an engaging smile. "It is indeed curious that a few days' absence can place Louis de Bussy, Lord of all Chermont, at disadvantage with a petty Gascon noble."

And, with a courteous bow, he left them, to join Saint Luc, who had just entered.

But the four favorites had short space to ponder over Bussy's unexpected mildness.

Saint Luc joined them speedily, and with the customary formality, presented Bussy's challenge to fight them either singly or collectively with whatever weapons and wherever they chose.

The challenge was accepted, on condition that the four favorites should fight Bussy and his three friends.

It was agreed that they would fight with rapiers and daggers, to the death, in a retired square near the Bastille. It was also agreed to avoid obvious disadvantage of the sun shining in the faces of either group of combatants, that they should fight in a semi-circle, in such a manner that the rays of the sun should shine upon each group from the side.

The duel was to take place at dawn, the morning after the Feast of Corpus Christi, and the contestants, having drawn their opponents by lot, were to be free after annihilating their adversaries, to attack the others.

The lots were drawn, Schomberg paired off with Riberauc; Quelus with Antraquet; Livarot with Maugiron; and Bussy with d'Epéron.

d'Epéron alone lost countenance.

In his soul he vowed he would not meet Bussy, no matter to what means, conspiracy, betrayal or hired assassins he must needs resort.

Thus matters stood. Both sides were well content. d'Epéron alone worked mole-like, to forestall his death at Bussy's hands. He leagued himself treacherously with the Duc d'Anjou, encouraging the latter to the foulest betrayal of which he stands convicted—although his name and record bear the blot of La Mole and Coccaud's bloody murder on the scaffold—for here he sacrificed an adherent who had spent blood and faith in his service, who designed on the morrow to risk his life for the honor of his perjured prince, who sacrificed him basely to a thwarted jealousy.

Upon the evening of this grim prologue to the morrow's duel—which had been engineered by d'Epéron—Bussy d'Amboise repaired to the house of his lady love, Madame de Monsoreau. The hours sped swiftly. Then just as she knelt to pray for his safety in the duel, and Bussy bent over her, three men entered the window. These were followed by a fourth, who was masked and armed with a loaded pistol and drawn sword.

This sudden apparition alarmed Bussy for an instant. Then, swiftly he thrust Madame de Monsoreau behind him and drawing his sword, he faced the men, one of whom carried a musket. The masked man spoke in sombre tones—

"What an excellent friend I find in Monsieur de Bussy!"

And by the voice Bussy recognized M. de Monsoreau, Diana's husband. "Come, sir, on guard!" shouted Bussy, lowering his sword, "or let me pass."

But his opponent made no move—only watched the window, where two more men had gained entrance. "And the others?" questioned Bussy, mockingly.

"At the door!" replied the husband. "Six—seven to one, and firearms to boot!" commented Bussy. "Why, this is no duel, it is murder!"

Then, with a swift turn of the wrist and shouting: "On guard, my bravos!"

Bussy overturned the prayer stool, drew a table in front of him, and piled a chair on top, so that they in some way formed a rampart between him and the attacking party.

The movement was swift, yet barely in time to save him from the bullet which sped toward him.

The bravos, urged on by M. de Monsoreau, sprang toward the maddened man, who watched them with vigilant flaming eyes. Then one thrust forth a venturesome hand toward the barricade.

Bussy's sword flashed like lightning and the man fell back with a cry, his arm slashed from wrist to shoulder.

Steps sounded in the corridor and the door was flung open. Bussy's friends, Remy and Saint Luc darted to his assistance. But more of Monsoreau's assassins followed and in the terrific onslaught Saint Luc, Remy and Diana were overpowered and bound. Helpless and gagged they could only watch Bussy's marvelous sword play.

One of Monsoreau's men had fallen with his temple torn open by Bussy's quivering steel. Another clutched at his breast and fell as that make-like blade found a passage to his heart.

Man after man went down before that overwhelming attack until seven of the assassins cumbered the floor, drenching it with their blood.

But, while this fierce combat was going on, Monsoreau had summoned others to his aid. Nine more men appeared on the scene, and, standing by the window, watchful and motionless, Monsoreau issued his orders. The newcomers attacked Bussy fiercely.

The count, his back against the wall, his sword firmly gripped in his right hand, but with his feet slipping on the treacherous, bloody footing, murmured:

"Out of the nine I shall certainly kill five. The four others will kill me!"

Dragging off his mantle, he wound it around his left arm for a shield. He sprang into the middle of the room, as if he disdained to fight long—

Duel to the Death.

In the mass of swiftly moving figures his sword hissed to the right and left like a viper launching its venom upon a foe.

As his blade flashed like a flaming white light, three times came the "seep-seep" of slipping metal as steel met steel, and then the sound of rending leather. Three times a spurt of blood poured down Bussy's sword, drenching his right hand.

During this time he had parried twenty thrusts with his left arm and now the mantle was rent and torn.

The assassins changed their tactics before Bussy's relentless onslaught. They abandoned the sword for the musket, clubbing brutally at him with the butt, while others drew their pistols, which they had not yet called into play. But Bussy skillfully dodged the flying bullets. In that supreme moment his sword multiplied itself as a hundredfold, he not only saw and acted, but he seemed even to divine the enemies' most secret thoughts. Bussy was in one of those moments of exultation in which man attains perfection. He was less than divine, being mortal, yet he was more than man.

Behind the crowding braves, Monsoreau waited, loading and exchanging pistols with his hired assassins. Bussy thought to end it all by falling upon Monsoreau and fighting him to the death.

It was the work of an instant for so skillful a swordsman as he to force a passage through that wall of steel. But, as he darted forth, Monsoreau fired.

The bullet shattered Bussy's sword, leaving only the hilt in his hand.

On the instant, Bussy had stooped, caught up his shattered blade and fastened it to his wrist with a handkerchief.

Then ensued a terrific onslaught in which one man with little better than no weapon, held firm against him six men who had made for themselves a respect of the bodies of their comrades who had fallen.

The onslaught grew momentarily fiercer. Monsoreau sent bullet after bullet toward Bussy. Then, as Bussy reeled, half stunned by the fray, and with his weapon shattered and almost useless and glanced about him, one of the fallen men rose and thrust a keen strong blade into his hand. It was his faithful Remy; his last movement was one of devotion.

And in that instant, a bullet wounded him in the thigh, and two sword-thrusts pierced his side.

Again Bussy was armed and as his enemies advanced upon him, his sword sang hissing about him, as, thrusting here, wounding and killing there, it described its circles about his head.

For an instant he lowered that powerful right arm, seeking to open the door of the chamber through which he hoped to escape.

But the bolts had yielded, and the key had turned in the lock. With sublime and furious energy Bussy thrust the foremost assassins from him. Then four men flung their weapons from them and caught him in their arms, seeking to strangle the man whom they could not subdue by force of arms. But with the hilt of his sword Bussy fought them off.

Again Monsoreau fired twice, and twice Bussy felt the bullets sting. Three men had flung themselves upon his right arm and wrenched his sword from his hand.

Bussy seized the assassin's wrist, drew the dagger from the wound, and turning it against his adversary, he forced him to kill himself. The sole remaining assassin sprang out of the window.

Triumphantly the young man glanced about him, caught up one of the dead men's swords, and with a single bound he was upon Monsoreau, whom he dashed to the ground, pinning him to the floor with a single thrust.

Then, bleeding, exhausted, and half fainting, Bussy dragged himself toward the door and out into the corridor. But here other blades flashed, and bullets whistled around him. The courtyard was guarded.

Rallying his last effort, Bussy now made his way back into the room, bolted the door and climbing up to the little window in the corner with the trellised iron work surrounding it, above and below, he mounted the sill and with his eyes measured the distance between himself and those sharp-pointed pinnacles below.

Weakened as he was, Bussy hesitated, doubting his ability to leap beyond them. Then steps sounded without, and summoning all his force, he braced himself with one hand and the one foot which he was still able to use; then he sprang forward. But his boots were drenched with blood, the sole slipped and he fell, the iron spikes below impaling his body and garments. Then a figure emerged from the gloom, followed by another and yet another.

"The you, Bussy?" cried a voice. Bussy's blood leaped; he recognized that voice, though the men were masked.

"Gentlemen—your highness, rescue me or I die," he cried.

"Well, your highness?" queried one of the men, turning respectfully to the other.

This latter made a single motion. "Deliver him from his sufferings," he commanded with a sinister burst of laughter.

A flash of light—a single reiteration and a bullet put an end to Bussy's sufferings.

On the morrow, at earliest dawn, Lavarat, Ribeirac and Antragues, wondering that Bussy had failed to meet them at the appointed place, hastened to his house to learn the cause of delay, then thinking that he might have lingered for a last carous, they turned toward that little dwelling which Madame de Monsoreau inhabited.

A vast concourse of people, shouting, struggling and gesticulating, surrounded the dismantled gardens, with their open gates, and drenched by streams of blood in the midst of all the evidences of frightful carnage, which were as yet untouched, the three friends beheld Bussy's corpse still impaled upon those frightful iron spikes.

A yell of rage, horror and revenge rose above that other discordant roar, and the three friends forced a passage through the mob to the side of that noble corpse.

Then Antragues, drawing his sword, dipped the blade into Bussy's still dripping blood, and lifting it on high cried:

"Bussy, I swear by this to wash away the memories of your wounds in the blood of your enemies."

And the two others replied: "Bussy, we swear to revenge your murder by death, or to die in the attempt."

Then the three hastened away to meet their enemies, the favorites of Henri III, upon that field of combat to which the murdered had summoned them.

The four favorites, accompanied by their valets, were already awaiting them. Their four swords spread upon the ground seemed like themselves to be gathering strength in this enforced delay.

"Gentlemen," cried Quelus, rising, and speaking with a certain sonorous hauteur, "we have had the honor to wait for you."

"Your pardon, gentlemen," responded Antragues. "We have been delayed by one of our friends."

"M. de Bussy?" sneered d'Epemont. "I note that he is not visible. Apparently he has overslept."

"Alas," replied d'Epemont, "I observed Schomburg, 'we will wait a trifle longer.'"

"M. de Bussy will not come," replied Antragues.

A look of amazement appeared upon the faces of the king's favorites, but the next word of Bussy's friends dispelled their illusion.

"You should be aware of that fact, gentlemen," Antragues said, "since he was assassinated last night!"

"And why should we?" Quelus cried indignantly.

"And are you sure?" d'Epemont added.

"As sure as I am that this is his blood," vociferated Antragues thrusting his sword into full view.

d'Epemont still shook his head doubtfully while the other three exclaimed with surprise.

"Truly," said Schomburg, "your grief is well founded."

"How well, you best know," replied Antragues.

"What do you mean?" exclaimed Quelus.

"Seek whom the crime profits," retorted Antragues.

With a yell or rage, Maugiron, Quelus, and Schomburg drew their swords and flung themselves upon Bussy's friends, demanding an explanation. But d'Epemont stood aside, though he drew his sword from his scabbard.

"Truly, you are in haste," replied Antragues.

"Is it our fault that we are four to three?" demanded d'Epemont insolently.

"Yes," replied Antragues. "Our friend is dead because you preferred to meet him in the grave rather than in fair field of battle. Do you understand?"

The others howled with rage, and shrieked unanimously. "We will fight three to three. These gentlemen will then see if, despite the rights of the duel we agreed upon, we are cowards who would profit by their loss, which we deplore as much as they."

"Gentlemen," protested Quelus, addressing his three opponents, "we fight by right, because we fight fairly in the sight of God that you may learn if we are assassins. On guard!" echoed Bussy's friends.

plied Antragues. "I cannot prevent his leaving it in the wrong place."

Seizing his own dagger, he placed himself on guard.

The ground chosen for this terrible duel was favorable for the conflict, being located in an isolated spot and concealed by many trees.

It was seldom visited save by children who came there to play in the day time, and by the thieves and drunks who slept there at night. But this was between the two visitations. There was nothing to attract the interest of casual pedestrians. Moreover, the many sheds or troughs which the horse merchants had erected there for their own convenience, robbed it of all pretence of being a pleasure resort.

Chicot, whose heart, though not of tender calibre, was beating high with pity for these brave young men, who risked their lives for the honor of their lords, seated himself upon a stool somewhat in front of the lackeys who awaited impassively the termination of the conflict.

d'Epemont essayed a last attempt at bravado.

"So the gentlemen fear me, it would seem," he scoffed.

"Silence, chatterbox," retorted Antragues.

"I have my rights under the terms of the duel," objected d'Epemont.

"Away," interposed Ribeirac, forcing him from the duelling ground with his sword.

Chicot, by a well-timed allusion to his perfidy of the day before, which, he, Chicot, had readily divined, quieted him.

Schomburg and Ribeirac engaged after the customary salute. Quelus and Antragues were already engaged in thrust and parry.

Maugiron and Livarat, each one backed against a trough, watched each other cautiously, and waited, waiting for an opening.

Then, as five o'clock sounded from St. Paul's, the battle raged began.

Fury marked the features of the combatants, but their lips were tightly closed, their pallor was threatening, and the involuntary trembling of their wrists indicated the rage which until now had slumbered in their hearts—controlled even now by prudence, but which, like a blooded horse, would sometimes break its bounds with terrible results.

For a few moments nothing save the "seep-seep" of the slipping steel-swords that were neither clicking nor rattling, was to be heard. But no thrust reached home.

Ribeirac, whether that he was weary or satisfied with his preliminary bout with his adversary, lowered his sword and paused for an instant.

With two swift forward steps, Schomburg fell upon him and delivered a thrust which resembled the first flash of lightning from the storm clouds.

Ribeirac was wounded. His face grew livid and the blood spurted from his shoulder. He broke away in order to gauge the extent of his injury.

Schomburg endeavored to repeat the thrust, but Ribeirac, by a parade in primo, wounded him in the side.

"Now," observed Ribeirac, "let us rest for an instant."

In the meantime the duel between Quelus and Antragues had become most heated. But Quelus, who had no dagger, was at a great disadvantage. Obligated to parry with his unprotected left arm, this was soon torn and cut, speedily drenching his left sword from his grasp. Bussy caught hand with blood, although he was not as yet dangerously wounded.

Antragues, on the contrary, appreciating his advantage to the full, and no less skillful than Quelus, pushed that advantage home with rapid thrust and parry.

Three swift lunges succeeded each other, and the blood flowed from three places in Quelus' breast.

At each thrust Quelus repeated: "It is nothing!"

Livarat and Maugiron were still bravely fighting. But Ribeirac, now furious with pain, and feeling that his strength was gradually giving way beneath the constant loss of blood, had fallen viciously upon Schomburg.

But Schomburg did not give way. He parried the blind thrusts with his sword and with the young man it now became blow for blow, lunge for lunge, parry for parry. Ribeirac was again badly wounded in the breast and Schomburg sustained a cut in the throat.

Ribeirac was mortally wounded, and, placing his hand over his breast, he left himself uncovered. Schomburg profited by this to wound Ribeirac dangerously a second time.

Ribeirac with his right hand caught at his adversary and with his left thrust his dagger into Schomburg's breast up to the hilt. The sharp blade pierced to the heart and Schomburg, with a dull cry, fell backward, dragging with him Ribeirac, who was still held by the sword which had pierced his breast.

Livarat, seeing his friend fall, with an adroit movement evaded his adversary and ran toward Ribeirac, pursued by Maugiron.

He gained a few feet upon his pursuer and then assisted Ribeirac in a final effort to remove the sword from the gaping wound in his breast. Together they managed to wrench it free.

the defensive, upon a footing which was now made dangerous by the blood that drenched it. In an instant a thrust in tierce ripped Livarat's head open and in his agony he dropped his sword and fell to his knees.

Antragues closely pressed Quelus Maugiron to hasten the end, thrust his sword through Livarat and rushed to Quelus' assistance.

Thus Quelus and Maugiron attacked Antragues, the sole survivor of his friends.

d'Epemont shouted with delight. Maugiron had no serious wounds and Quelus, though covered with blood, had not sustained serious harm. Antragues realized his danger. He had himself escaped without even a scratch, yet he was beginning to tire and it was no time to ask a truce of a man who was wounded, and another who overpowered with the spirit of combat. With a sudden blow from the flat of his sword he thrust Quelus aside and leaped quickly behind one of the horse troughs.

Quelus attempted a lunge which, however, penetrated only the wood. At that moment Maugiron fell upon Antragues from behind, and the latter turned to meet this new assailant. Quelus profited by this to leap over the trough.

"He is lost," cried Chicot.

"Long live the king!" shouted d'Epemont.

"Silence, sir," shouted Antragues, "do not insult a man who will fight to his last breath."

"And who is not yet dead," added Livarat, and rising from the dust and blood in which in his agony he had wallowed, at the very moment when they had given him the least heed, he dragged himself forward on his knees and thrust his dagger between Maugiron's shoulders. Maugiron fell with only a single groan.

Livarat fell back fainting; this last effort had exhausted his strength.

"Monsieur de Quelus," said Antragues, lowering his sword, "you are a brave man, surrender, and you shall have your life."

"Surrender?" retorted Quelus furiously, "have you yet downed me?"

"But you are riddled with wounds, and I am in full possession of my strength."

"Long live the king!" cried Quelus, "I still have my sword."

"That you have not," retorted Antragues, and seizing the blade he wrenched it from Quelus' failing grasp. Only in so doing he cut his finger slightly.

"Oh," shrieked Quelus, "A sword—a sword!" And flinging himself upon Antragues he sought to strangle him with his two hands.

Antragues allowed him to obtain a body hold, then slipping his sword from his right hand to his left, and taking in his right the dagger, he repeatedly stabbed Quelus, covering himself with his enemy's blood, until the latter, in one last effort, fairly made Antragues waver and gasp for breath. But Quelus' strength betrayed him at the last. He staggered, released his hold, and fell backward.

"Long live the K—," he gurgled and fainted.

Then over that field of battle and death the angel of silence spread its wings. d'Epemont, in terror, made the sign of the cross and fled. Chicot ran to Quelus and raised him in his arms. The young man was bleeding from nineteen different wounds.

He opened his eyes.

"Antragues," he murmured, "on my honor I am innocent of Bussy's death."

"I believe you," replied the other in a voice choked with emotion, and by a graceful thought, he gathered up the swords of the fallen combatants, and gave to the dying Quelus his "We might have been friends had not politics prevented," murmured Quelus gracefully, "but now fly!"

"Even though the scaffold stare me in the face I will not abandon so brave a man while life lasts," retorted Antragues.

"Young man," observed Chicot, "you have escaped death today by a miracle. Do not again tempt Providence. I will see to your friends, even as if they had been the king's followers."

And Antragues wrapping himself in his mantle to conceal his blood-stained garments, disappeared through the Porte Saint Antoine.

The power of words is immense. A well chosen word has often sufficed to stop a flying army, to change defeat into victory, and to save an empire—Emile de la Roche.

WE ENCOURAGE FAIR DEALING

Keen Competition is the Best Friend of this Business

WE HAVE got the people coming. What's the reason? Because we sell cheaper. Compare our prices and be convinced, as hundreds of others have done. Perkins' guarantee goes with every article sold in this store. Money refunded cheerfully if goods are not satisfactory. We want every one who trades here to be thoroughly satisfied.

MORE NEW COATS

The enormous selling of the past two months has created quite a dearth in some lines which we have been filling up lately. These new ones are from the maker whose goods we regard as the standard of style and quality for Canada—and we would like very much to show them to you.

Among these new ones—eight different styles, all of them in the popular greys—mostly in mixed tweeds. Cheaper coats, then the medium prices, and as high as you will want to pay—say about $20.00.

A small gang of men have been left in the swamps, where they work with wheelbarrows and they will carry on the work throughout the winter.

WITH THE ROSCIANS
It was worth while attending the opera "Martha," as presented last night by the Roscian Company, simply to hear the "Last Rose of Summer," sung as it was by the leading lady (Miss Nola), its effect was slightly marred by over-acting—something to which the graceful Lady Harriet was prone throughout the play—but the sweetness and expression of the voice that carried the old ballad were enjoyable. With all Miss Nola's proneness to posing, which may arise from over-anxiety to fill her conception of the part she is otherwise so appealing that one would like to see Miss Nola's voice and face and temperament, and her evident ambition, utilized in a stronger emotional part in some larger company compelled by a severe dramatic master to greater naturalness. One would want to hear Miss Nola frequently then. Her many good made Mr. Flavell's interpretation of his amusing part so enjoyable. Naturalness is an essential in those who would win the applause on the stage in a realistic period. Nancy, the coquettish maid (Miss Crowley) was as charmingly natural and entertaining when she sat on the kitchen table and permitted Plunkett to make love to her, as she was out of place in evening-dress in Lady Harriet's drawing-room. Plunkett (Mr. Norman) who has been to be an English farmer of the eighteenth century, in manner, appearance and accent, however, he suggested a dashing cowboy masquerading as a farmer, and with his earthy attack of his part was sufficiently British, but a friendly audience could wish that his fine natural voice were possessed in singing of more of the control and smoothness that abounded in Miss Nola's. The chorus, from the strenuous brunette to the rather staid-looking beauty, filled their parts well and sang effectively. Of the story of the opera itself—"Martha" is the story of a servant lass, who falls in love with a farmer, and marries him when he turns out to be an earl; a pretty and amusing plot.

THE ROSCIANS

The Roscian Opera Company will present "The Pirates of Penzance" this evening in the Thistle Theatre. The play is given in two acts. The scene is laid in the Orkney Islands, where a band of pirates have made their homes. The pirates have assembled to celebrate the initiation of Frederic, an apprentice, who at his twenty-first year is to become a full-fledged member of the band. Frederic is really disgusted with the prospect, and instead of becoming closer aligned to piracy, proposed now that his indenture has expired to abandon the life. He accused his comrades of being too tender hearted, inasmuch as they never attack a weaker party than themselves, or of ever molesting an orphan, and as this information became known, each ship they capture proves to be manned entirely by orphans. They are still debating this question when a herd of maidens, the daughters of Major-General Stanley, appear on the scene and are captured by the pirates. Frederic is enamored of Mabel, the youngest daughter, and the whole band decides to marry the girls willy-nilly, when a ticklish situation is relieved by the arrival of Major-General Stanley, who, on learning that his daughters have been captured by the famous Pirates of Penzance, secures their release by declaring himself an orphan. The second act reveals General Stanley at the tomb of his ancestors, where he has come to do penance for falsely declaring himself an orphan. Frederic has left the Pirates' band at Mabel's request and has informed the police that they are about to seek vengeance for the Major-General's duplicity. The Pirates enter to seize the General, and are met by the police. A struggle ensues and the latter are worsted. The Major-General, knowing that a declaration of the rights of orphans will be unavailing, calls upon the Pirates in the name of Queen Victoria to surrender. They immediately give up their weapons and declare themselves to be former noblemen, forced by stress of circumstances to adopt a pirates' career.

MOTOR BUSES FOR CALGARY

Albertan—E. S. Bruce, who with C. S. Lott of this city is promoting a motor bus system for Calgary, arrived in the city yesterday from the west. In conversation with the Albertan last evening he said that the buses which are to run on Calgary streets are now shipped and that they would be running in Calgary within a very short time. These buses are somewhat similar to those used in some of the large towns of the old country. Mr. Bruce said that in many cities the buses were outdoing the electric railways by their usefulness and were receiving great support from the public. The buses to be used in this city are large and of the very best make. Each one will have forty horse power with a seating capacity for eighteen persons. At present only three motors have been purchased, but if these are not sufficient and they get the support of the public more will be ordered.
